1. During the early part of May 1948, the Chinese Communists in Manchouli received more than one hundred thousand remodeled Japanese army summer uniforms from the USSR.
2. From December 1947 through February 1948, the Chinese Communists shipped an average of fifty carloads of staple crops a day through Manchouli to the USSR. In exchange for these crops, the Soviet authorities usually send the Chinese Communists ammunition, machinery, cotton goods, and commodities which the Soviet Army took out of Manchuria after the surrender.
